Review

Sometimes you just have to submerge yourself in a good mystery. That is what I did with 7th Heaven by James Patterson. This is the 7th book in the Women's Murder Club series. If you already a fan you need to check this book out, if you have never read the series you can still check it out, but you may want to start with the 1st book called 1st to die. I picked that one up a few years ago and have been addicted to this series ever since.

This book follows Detective Lindsay Boxer's two cases; one for a missing person an ex-governors son and her investigation into mysterious fires that are destroying homes and killing the owners. The book is full of suspense twist and turns. I found I could not put this book down and that when I did I kept wondering what would happen next. The story is that addictive!

Over all I give this book 5/5. James Patterson is a great writer and you constantly feel as if you are in the settings of his books watching it all unfold.

I'm sure if your a mystery fan you will love this book as much as I do.
